

If you were looking to buy a car, vacuum cleaner, or refrigerator, you could talk to friends and family and find information on the Internet, in consumer magazines, or in other published resources.

Similarly, when choosing a school, you may also have to make phone calls and collect written material from different schools to get the information you need. Start your search by thinking about your child. After all, you know your son or daughter better than anyone else does.

---

---

---

---

